The Paul Noble Method

Over the years, I have taught many, many people. Curiously, they have each had much the same story to tell regarding their previous experiences of language learning. As a result, these days, when I first start a teaching session, I ask my students to raise their hands if they have had any of the following experiences.

Raise your hand, I say:

- If you studied a language for several years at school but came out unable to really say anything.
- If you have ever bought a language course and given up around page thirty, somewhere around chapter two.
- If you have ever felt more confused by a teacher's explanation of the language than by the language itself.
- If you have ever been amazed by just how closely grammar books resemble furniture assembly instructions.
- If you have ever felt that you may in fact be more or less incapable of learning a foreign language.

Invariably, all the students soon have at least one hand in the air – and they laugh. They laugh because for some reason our language-learning experiences tend to be very similar and, sadly, these similar experiences tend not to be very good ones.

My own initial experiences of language learning were also uncannily similar to those described above. In fact, when I ask my students these questions, my own hand is the first to go up – and it stays up until we have gone through them all.

However, these less-than-positive experiences have had an upside both for myself and for those individuals I have taught because they, along with a number of other factors, have helped inform and shape the method that will be used during this course.

Using this method, you will learn how to communicate in French and how to formulate your own ideas and thoughts using French.

The Paul Noble Method

As you learn with it, you will quickly discover that I do not use complicated grammatical explanations at all, and I will not ask you to memorise long lists of vocabulary – the way the course is structured will by itself ensure that you remember what you are taught. Instead, through your interaction with the CDs, I will lead you through the French language, enabling you to build up complex sentences by yourself, step by step, so that you are actually speaking independently in French by the end of the course. And this is regardless of how little, or how much, you know when you begin.

You will also discover that the language I teach is designed to be adaptable, so that you will be able to use it just as easily for holidaying in a French-speaking country as for living or working in one; it will be just as easy to use it to order a coffee as to hold a conversation with the waiter who brings it to you. And, again, all of this regardless of how little, or how much, you know when you begin.

At the time of writing, this method has already proved extremely successful with a very great many students, including hundreds of so-called "no-hopers". Interestingly, not one of these students failed to learn using this method. It is these many success cases and thank-you letters – and even the occasional hug – that have made teaching languages so very worthwhile for me and it is this which has persuaded me to publish my courses here, for the first time.

I anticipate and hope that they will be as effective for you as they have been for so many of my other students.

Au revoir - and good luck!

How to use this booklet

This booklet has been designed to provide you with a quick and easy way to review and reinforce the key vocabulary, structures and contents of your Paul Noble Method French course.

Although the core part of your learning will take place via your use of the accompanying course CDs, we have also included this booklet in order to provide you with a quick reference guide to the language, as well as a way to begin to get to grips with both reading and writing French, should you wish to do so.

It is worth noting that this booklet should be used after you have begun working through the accompanying CDs. It will serve as excellent reinforcement, guidance and review material but is not designed to teach you French by itself. This is what the CDs will do – and very rapidly, too. After you have begun working through the CDs, you will find this booklet to be an extremely useful review and reference resource, but you must start by listening to the CDs.

So, if you haven't done so already, go and unwrap CD 1 and get started. You are about to find out just how good a course this is!

Core course review

The best way to use this part of your booklet is to start by reading through a page, looking at both the English and the French. Then go back to the beginning of that same page and, while covering the French side of the text, translate the English into French – just as you did when you listened to the course CDs.

Once you can get 90% of a page's content correct, move on to the next page and follow the process again. By doing this, you will quickly recall and reinforce what you learnt with the CDs.

The past (using "have")

1	Je
have	ai
l have	J'ai

NOTE! Notice that, as there would be two vowels touching in Je ai, it contracts instead to J'ai – this is a common occurrence in French and one that you will guickly get used to.

visited	visité
the Louvre	le Louvre
I have visited the Louvre.	J'ai visité le Louvre.
the park	le parc
I have visited the park.	J'ai visité le parc.
prepared	préparé
I have prepared	J'ai préparé
the coffee	le café
I have prepared the coffee.	J'ai préparé le café.
for you	pour vous
I have prepared the coffee for you.	J'ai préparé le café pour vous.

English words which end in "ion" came into English through French. There are 1250 of them. If you know them in English, then you can use them in French.

reservation	réservation
invitation	invitation
decoration	décoration

If you take an "ion" word, such as préparation, cut off the "ation" on the end and add a café "é" in its place, you will have a word like préparé, which means prepared. This means you can now say: I have prepared, I have visited, I have decorated etc. Try the example below:

paration

préparation

The Past (using "have")

Now, cut off the "ation", which leaves you with "prépar", and then add a café "é". You will end up with préparé, which means prepared.

I have prepared	J'ai préparé
I have visited	J'ai visité
decoration	décoration
I have decorated	J'ai décoré
the house	la maison

NOTE! One of the best things about French, and one way in which it is easier than English, is that in order to talk about the past, you don't need to use as many different tenses as you would in English.

For instance, take the following sentences in English: I have decorated the house, I decorated the house, I did decorate the house. In French, these are all expressed in the same way, simply as: I have decorated the house, which in French is: J'ai décoré la maison. The above three sentences can therefore be served by the same single tense in French.

Have a go at this using the following three prompts:

I've decorated the house.	J'ai décoré la maison.
I decorated the house.	J'ai décoré la maison.
I did decorate the house.	J'ai décoré la maison.

You see, they are all the same! This is excellent news, as it means you don't need to worry about switching between tenses when talking about events in the past in French.

reservation
reserved
I have reserved
I have reserved a table.
You have réservation réservé J'ai réservé J'ai réservé une table. Vous avez

You have reserved a table.	Vous avez réservé une table.
We have	Nous avons
We have reserved a table.	Nous avons réservé une table.
He has	ll a
He has reserved a table.	ll a réservé une table.
She has	Elle a
She has reserved a table.	Elle a réservé une table.
You have ( inf. )	Tu as
You have reserved a table. (inf.)	Tu as réservé une table.
They have	lls ont
They have reserved a table.	lls ont réservé une table.
They have (female group)	Elles ont
They have reserved a table.	Elles ont réservé une table.

NOTE! As you may have noticed above, there are two words for they in French. Normally, you will use ils for they. However, if you are talking about an entirely, 100%, female group – a group of five women, for example – you should use elles. If the group is male, or partly male, however, you will use ils – which is more or less the default form. Even if a group contained 99 women and just 1 man, you would still use ils.

This is not something to worry or think too much about, though, and if in doubt use ils!

Asking questions in the past

There are several ways to ask questions in French. Let's start by simply inverting the word order, as we do in English.

Inverting the word order

You have	Vous avez
Have you?	Avez-vous?
Have you visited?	Avez-vous visité?
Did you visit?	Avez-vous visité?

Notice that the above two phrases are both translated in the same way in French.

Did you visit the Louvre?
Yes, I visited the Louvre.
Have you visited the park?
Have you prepared the coffee?
Have you prepared roast beef for dinner?

Avez-vous visité le Louvre? Oui, j'ai visité le Louvre. Avez-vous visité le parc? Avez-vous préparé le café? Avez-vous préparé le rosbif pour le dîner?

NOTE! Notice how the French use the words for the in French (le/la/les) more than we use the in English. You can see this in the above example. Literally: Have you prepared the roast beef for the dinner? The best way to get used to this is simply to remember the French word with the "the" already attached to it and then use it in that way. So think of dinner not as dîner but as le dîner, and think of roast beef not as rosbif but as le rosbif.

Have you decorated the house? Did you decorate the house? Have you reserved a table for dinner?

We have Have we? Avez-vous décoré la maison? Avez-vous décoré la maison? Avez-vous réservé une table pour le dîner? Nous avons Avons-nous? Have we reserved a table for dinner?

Have we visited the Louvre?

Avons-nous réservé une table pour le dîner? Avons-nous visité le Louvre?

Using "est-ce que ...?"

Another way to ask a question in French is to put est-ce que...? (literally: is it that...?) in front of a statement.

We have reserved a table.	Nous avons réservé une table.
Have we reserved a table?	Est-ce que nous avons réservé une table?
You have decorated the house.	Vous avez décoré la maison.
Have you decorated the house?	Est-ce que vous avez décoré la maison?

Using a rising intonation

Another way to ask a question is to use a rising intonation, as we do in English. However, this is used far more frequently in French than it is in English. To ask a question this way, simply raise the pitch of your voice at the end of the sentence.

Try the examples below. First say the sentence as a statement, and then try again, this time raising your pitch at the end to change it into a question.

He has reserved a table.	ll a réservé une table.
Has he reserved a table?	ll a réservé une table?
They have prepared roast beef for dinner.	lls ont préparé le rosbif pour le dîner.
Have they prepared roast beef for dinner?	lls ont préparé le rosbif pour
	le dîner?

NOTE! Although a rising intonation is used very frequently in speech in order to ask a question in French, it is not normally used in writing. Why? Well, simply because the reader cannot hear you when you raise your pitch at the end of the sentence, can they? So, when writing, use est-ce que...? or invert the word order.

Using "it" in the past

I have prepared. I have prepared it. J'ai préparé. Je l'ai préparé.

NOTE! Notice how, unlike in English, the "it" goes before "have" – not after it. For this, keep in mind the simple rule you learnt during the course: "have" always steals the pronouns and places them directly in front of itself. (Pronouns are little words like it, me, you, us, him, her, them.)

You have prepared. You prepared it. We have prepared it. to buy bought We have bought it. He has bought it. to understand understood He has understood it She has understood it. You have understood it. (inf.) →1 to eat eaten They have eaten it. They have eaten it. (female group)

Vous avez préparé. Vous l'avez préparé. Nous l'avons préparé. acheter acheté Nous l'avons acheté. Il l'a acheté. comprendre compris Il l'a compris. Elle l'a compris. Tu l'as compris. manger mangé Ils l'ont mangé. Elles l'ont mangé.

→ JARGON BUSTER 1

Inf. = informal (referring here to the tu form of address used when talking to family, close friends and children).

Using "some/any" in the past

I have eaten it. some / some of it / any / any of it I have eaten some of it. to find found They have found it. They have found some of it. He has found some of it. She has found some of it. You have found some of it. Have you found some of it? Je l'ai mangé. en J'en ai mangé. trouver trouvé Ils l'ont trouvé. Ils en ont trouvé. Il en a trouvé. Elle en a trouvé. Tu en as trouvé. Vous en avez trouvé. Est-ce que vous en avez trouvé?

Using negatives in the past

l have	J'ai
I have prepared.	J'ai préparé.
I have prepared it.	Je l'ai préparé.
I haven't prepared it.	Je ne l'ai pas préparé.
l didn't prepare it.	Je ne l'ai pas préparé.
You haven't prepared it.	Vous ne l'avez pas préparé.
You didn't prepare it.	Vous ne l'avez pas préparé.
You didn't prepare any (of it).	Vous n'en avez pas préparé.
You didn't find it.	Vous ne l'avez pas trouvé.
We didn't find it.	Nous ne l'avons pas trouvé.
We didn't find any (of it).	Nous n'en avons pas trouvé.
to buy	acheter
bought	acheté
We didn't buy it.	Nous ne l'avons pas acheté.
to sell	vendre
sold	vendu
We didn't sell it.	Nous ne l'avons pas vendu.
to see	voir

The Past (using "have") seen We didn't see it. We didn't understand it. He didn't understand it. She didn't understand it. me She didn't understand me. They didn't understand me. to wait waited They didn't wait for you. They didn't wait for me. He didn't wait for me.

vu

Nous ne l'avons pas vu. Nous ne l'avons pas compris. Il ne l'a pas compris. Elle ne l'a pas compris. me Elle ne m'a pas compris. Ils ne m'ont pas compris. attendre attendu Ils ne vous ont pas attendu. Ils ne m'ont pas attendu. Il ne m'a pas attendu.

The past (using "to be")

Sometimes in French, you cannot use "have" for the past tense. Instead, you need to use a form of "to be". This occurs when you use a verb  $\rightarrow 2$  in the past that involves going or coming in any sense.

So, when you are talking about going, coming, arriving, departing, going out, going up, coming down, being born (coming into the world) or dying (going out of the world), you will use "to be" to form the past tense – not "to have".

Therefore, to say in French that he has gone / he went you will literally say "he is gone". To say she has arrived / she arrived you will say "she is arrived". To say he has left / he left you will say "he is left". This is, however, only for verbs that involve going or coming in some sense. 3 Let's look at an example:

l am	Je suis
to arrive	arriver
arrived	arrivé / arrivée / arrivés /
	arrivées
I have arrived.	Je suis arrivé / arrivée.
We are	Nous sommes
We have arrived.	Nous sommes arrivés /
	arrivées.

Before moving on, it is probably worth explaining why "arrived" is spelt in four different ways above – and sometimes in two different ways in a single sentence!

The first point to make is that, when speaking, this spelling difference doesn't matter because all four spellings are pronounced in exactly the same way: arrivé. However, if you decide that you wish to learn to write French, you will need to be aware that the spelling for "arrived" changes according to what I like to call "the fiancé rule".

→ JARGON BUSTER 2

What is a verb? An easy way to identify a verb is to see if you can put "I", "he" or "we" directly in front of it. If you can, it is a verb. For example: I go, he eats, we fly, I buy, he thinks, we leave. All the underlined words are verbs; you know this because you can put "I", "he" or "we" directly in front of them.

→ JARGON BUSTER 3

The exception to the 'coming and going' rule is rester, meaning to stay. After going or coming somewhere, of course, you would need somewhere to stay, which may help you to remember this.

The fiancé rule

You may well be thinking: what on earth is this? Well, we all know what a fiancé is: a person someone is engaged to. In English, a male person you are engaged to is spelt fiancé. However, a female person you are engaged to is spelt fiancé with an extra "e" on the end.

This fiancé/fiancée rule happens to apply to all verbs in French when they are used with "to be" to form the past tense. Let's look at an example:

l	have	arrived.	(said	by a	man)
I	have	arrived.	(said	by a	woman)

Je suis arrivé. Je suis arrivée.

You can see how, although it is arrivé for a man who has arrived, it is arrivé for a woman, with an extra "e" on the end. This is just the same as for fiancé/fiancé – fiancé for a man but fiancée, with an extra "e", for a woman.

As stated earlier, however, it is only for this group of "going and coming" verbs (which use "to be" to form the past tense) that there is this difference. Normal verbs, which use "have" to form the past tense, are the same no matter who they refer to. Take a look:

I have eaten. (said by a man) I have eaten. (said by a woman) J'ai mangé. J'ai mangé.

You see? They are the same - and they never change!

The fiancé rule doesn't simply stop here, however. In English, if you are engaged to one male person, he is your fiancé. If you're engaged to one female person, she is your fiancée. What would happen, however, if you were very naughty and were simultaneously engaged to two people? Well, it works like anything else in English: you add an "s".

I have one book.	but I have two books.
l have one male fiancé.	but I have two male fiancés.
l have one female fiancée.	but I have two female fiancées.

Now let's see this in action in French:

I have arrived. (said by a man)	Je suis arrivé.
We have arrived. (said by two men)	Nous sommes arrivés.
I have arrived. (said by a woman)	Je suis arrivée.
We have arrived. (said by two women)	Nous sommes arrivées.

So, if you are familiar with the English word "fiancé", you now know the fiancé rule and so can write very sophisticated, advanced and, crucially, correct French.

The fiancé rule shows you how to write the correct endings, depending on who it is that has arrived, gone, left etc. Let's look at this through a series of examples:

I have arrived. (said by a man) We have arrived. (said by two men) Je suis arrivé. Nous sommes arrivés. I have arrived. (said by a woman) We have arrived. (said by two women) You are You have arrived. (said to one man) You have arrived. (said to two men) You have arrived. (said to one woman) You have arrived. (said to two women) Je suis arrivée. Nous sommes arrivées. Vous êtes Vous êtes arrivé. Vous êtes arrivés. Vous êtes arrivée. Vous êtes arrivée.

NOTE! Again, be aware that the spelling of "arrived" alters according to who it is that has arrived and always according to the fiancé rule.

Now take a look at these other verbs below and simply apply the rule in exactly the same way.

to go gone I have gone. (said by a man) I have gone. (said by a woman) We have gone. (said by two men) We have gone. (said by two women) You are You have gone. (said to one man) You have gone. (said to one woman) You have gone. (said to two men) You have gone. (said to two women) to come came He came yesterday. She came this morning. to leave left He left yesterday evening. She left this evening.

aller allé / allée / allés / allées le suis allé. le suis allée. Nous sommes allés. Nous sommes allées. Vous êtes Vous êtes allé. Vous êtes allée. Vous êtes allés. Vous êtes allées. venir venu / venue / venus / venues Il est venu hier. Elle est venue ce matin. partir parti / partie / partis / parties Il est parti hier soir. Elle est partie ce soir.

The present

Using "it is"

Words ending in "-ic" and "-ical" in English end in "-ique" in French.

typical	typique
exotic	exotique
political	politique
It is	C'est
It is typical!	C'est typique!
It is exotic!	C'est exotique!
It is political!	C'est politique!
It is not	Ce n'est pas
It is not political!	Ce n'est pas politique!
It is not exotic!	Ce n'est pas exotique!

Talking about what you would like to, want to, can and must do

"I would like to..."

l would like	Je voudrais
I would like to prepare the dinner.	Je voudrais préparer le dîner.
with you	avec vous
I would like to prepare the dinner with you.	Je voudrais préparer le dîner avec vous.
I would like to prepare the dinner because	Je voudrais préparer le dîner
	parce que
l'm hungry (I have hunger).	J'ai faim.

NOTE! You will probably remember, from your time with the CDs, that the "m" at the end of faim is not clearly pronounced but rather is only touched on nasally. This is because, in general, consonants on the very end of French words are not pronounced unless they are in FoR LuCK.

The Present

I would like to prepare the coffee because Lana thingth (I have thingt)
l am thirsty (I have thirst).

Je voudrais préparer le café parce que J'ai soif.

NOTE! By contrast, the "f" on the end of soif is pronounced because it is in FoR LuCK.

Je voudrais préparer le café I would like to prepare the coffee for you. pour vous. I would like to prepare the roast beef for Je voudrais préparer le rosbif (the) dinner pour le dîner. I would like to reserve a table le voudrais réserver une table I would like to reserve a table for dinner. le voudrais réserver une table pour le dîner. savoir to know I would like to know le voudrais savoir if si le voudrais savoir si c'est I would like to know if it is possible. possible. vous voulez vou want vous le voulez vou want it I would like to know if you want it. le voudrais savoir si vous le voulez. I would like to know if you want some (of it). le voudrais savoir si vous en voulez. why pourquoi I would like to know why you want some Je voudrais savoir pourquoi (of it) vous en voulez. I would like to know why it is possible. Je voudrais savoir pourquoi c'est possible. I would like to know why it is not possible. Je voudrais savoir pourquoi ce n'est pas possible.

"want"

there I want to go there. là Je veux aller là. It is possible (and in fact usual) in French to replace là with y, which also means there. Let's look at both:

to go there ( using là )	aller là
to go there ( using y )	y aller
I want to go there.	Je veux y aller.
I want to go there with you.	Je veux y aller avec vous.
l don't want to go there.	Je ne veux pas y aller.
You don't want to go there. (inf.)	Tu ne veux pas y aller.
He wants to go there.	ll veut y aller.
She wants to go there.	Elle veut y aller.
to eat	manger
She wants to eat.	Elle veut manger.
We want to eat.	Nous voulons manger.
You want to eat.	Vous voulez manger.
They want to eat.	lls veulent manger.
They want to eat. ( female group )	Elles veulent manger.

NOTE! Don't forget that veulent is pronounced "vurl". The letters "ent" are silent here, as they are whenever "ent" comes at the end of a verb that follows "they".

They don't want to eat. They don't want to eat it. I want to know why they don't want to eat it. I want to know why they don't want to eat any of it.

"can"

I can go there with you. I can go there this evening. I cannot go there this evening. You cannot go there this evening. (inf.) He can go there this evening. Ils ne veulent pas manger. Ils ne veulent pas le manger. Je veux savoir pourquoi ils ne veulent pas le manger. Je veux savoir pourquoi ils ne veulent pas en manger.

Je peux y aller avec vous. Je peux y aller ce soir. Je ne peux pas y aller ce soir. Tu ne peux pas y aller ce soir. Il peut y aller ce soir.

The Present

He cannot go there this evening. We can go there this evening. We cannot go there this evening.

We cannot come this evening.

- to see We cannot see it. They cannot see it. They cannot see it. (female group) They cannot see any of it.
- Il ne peut pas y aller ce soir. Nous pouvons y aller ce soir. Nous ne pouvons pas y aller ce soir. Nous ne pouvons pas venir ce soir. voir Nous ne pouvons pas le voir. Ils ne peuvent pas le voir. Elles ne peuvent pas le voir. Ils ne peuvent pas en voir.

NOTE! Don't forget that peuvent is pronounced "perv". The letters "ent" are silent here, as they are whenever "ent" comes at the end of a verb that follows "they".

to leave
They cannot leave.
tomorrow
They cannot leave tomorrow.

to go out They cannot go out tomorrow.

I would like to know why they cannot go out tomorrow. to understand They cannot understand it.

They cannot understand me.

They cannot understand you.

to sell They cannot sell it. They cannot sell any of it. partir Ils ne peuvent pas partir. demain lls ne peuvent pas partir demain. sortir Ils ne peuvent pas sortir demain. Je voudrais savoir pourquoi ils ne peuvent pas sortir demain. comprendre lls ne peuvent pas le comprendre. Ils ne peuvent pas me comprendre. Ils ne peuvent pas vous comprendre. vendre Ils ne peuvent pas le vendre.

Ils ne peuvent pas en vendre.

to wait to wait for you They cannot wait for you.

to wait for me He can wait for me. attendre vous attendre Ils ne peuvent pas vous attendre. m'attendre Il peut m'attendre.

NOTE! Make sure, when pronouncing these verbs that end in "dre", to pronounce the "dre" very clearly. It is pronounced like the "dra" at the end of the English name "Sandra".

"must"

l must go there with you.	Je dois y aller avec vous.
to prepare the dinner	préparer le dîner
l must prepare the dinner.	Je dois préparer le dîner.
to prepare it	le préparer
l must prepare it.	Je dois le préparer.
You must prepare it. ( inf .)	Tu dois le préparer.
She must prepare it.	Elle doit le préparer.
She must find it.	Elle doit le trouver.
We must find it.	Nous devons le trouver.
We must find some (of it).	Nous devons en trouver.
You must buy some (of it).	Vous devez en acheter.
They must buy some (of it).	lls doivent en acheter.
They must buy some (of it). ( female group )	Elles doivent en acheter.

NOTE! Don't forget that doivent is pronounced "dwoirve". The letters "ent" are silent here, as they are whenever "ent" comes at the end of a verb that follows "they".

The present tense without "want", "can", "must" etc.

We will now take a look at the more general present tense in French – the present tense without "want", "can", "must" etc. By the end of this quick run-through, you will be able to use the vast majority of verbs in the French language, in the present tense, with almost no difficulty whatsoever. To do this, you need only to follow two very simple steps.

The first step: chop off the "r"! - Verbs ending in "er"

To use the present tense with verbs that end in "er" in French, simply chop off the "r" and pronounce the consonant at the end of the word. Let's take "to think" as an example.

to think

penser

In order to say I think, he thinks, she thinks etc., simply chop off the "r" from the end of penser and you are left with pense (pronounced rather like "ponse" in the English word response). Let's try a few examples:

I think / I am thinking	Je pense
He thinks / He is thinking	ll pense
She thinks / She is thinking	Elle pense

You see? Having simply chopped off the "r" from penser, we have discovered the present tense for I, he and she.

Chopping off the "r" also works for you think (inf.) and for they think in spoken French, as they both sound exactly the same as pense above. For those interested in learning to write the language, however, notice that there's a spelling change (although the pronunciation remains exactly the same as it is for the examples above). Let's take a look:

You think / You are thinking (inf.) They think / They are thinking They think / They are thinking (female group) Tu penses Ils pensent Elles pensent

NOTE! As you will recall, the letters "ent" are silent whenever "ent" comes at the end of a verb that follows "they", and so pensent is still pronounced "pense" – exactly the same pronunciation as for the other spellings above.

Therefore, to find the present tense for I, he, she, you (inf.) and they – for verbs ending in "er" – simply chop off the "r" and pronounce the consonant at the end of the word.

The second step: swap the "r"! - Verbs ending in "er"

Chopping off the "r" above has given us the present tense for everything except you (formal) and we, which behave slightly differently from the others but which are also extremely straightforward. To work out how to say you think / you are thinking, you simply copy the sound of "to think".

to think You think / You are thinking

penser Vous pensez

Although spelt differently, penser and pensez are pronounced in exactly the same way, so if you know how to say to think, to eat, to speak etc., that means you also know how to say you think, you eat, you speak etc. They sound exactly the same, the only difference being in the spelling, because you swap the "r" at the end for a "z".

The Present

For we think / we are thinking you simply have an "ons" instead of an "ez" at the end.

You think / You are thinking We think / We are thinking Vous pensez Nous pensons

NOTE! These patterns work in exactly the same way for all regular verbs ending in "er" in French – that's almost 90% of all verbs in the French language!

Let's take a look now at how this applies to the minority of verbs in French that don't end in "er".

The first step: chop off the "r"! - Verbs not ending in "er"

For regular French verbs that don't end in "er", again you simply chop off the "r" – along with any letters that follow it – but then you do not pronounce the last consonant at the end of the word. Let's take "to wait" as an example.

to wait

attendre

In order to say he waits, she waits etc., again simply chop off the "r" from the end of attendre – along with any letters that follow it – and you will be left with attend, pronounced "atton". Now, let's use it!

He waits / He is waiting	ll attend
She waits / She is waiting	Elle attend

As you can see, having simply chopped off the "r" - along with any letters that follow it - from attendre, we have once again discovered the present tense.

Chopping off the "r" also works for l wait and for you wait (inf.) in spoken French, as they both sound exactly the same as attend above. For those interested in learning to write the language, however, notice that there is a minor spelling change (although the pronunciation remains exactly the same as it is above).

I wait / I am waiting You wait / You are waiting (inf.) J'attends Tu attends This same step described above can be taken with countless other "non-er" verbs, for example "to finish".

to finish

finir

le finis

Tu finis

Elle finit

II finit

Again, you simply cut off the "r" and then make sure not to pronounce the consonant at the end of the word, if there is one. In the case of finir there will again be some spelling variations, as there are above, but each variation will be pronounced in exactly the same way; in this case they are all pronounced "fini".

I finish / I am finishing You finish / You are finishing (inf.) He finishes / He is finishing She finishes / She is finishing Again, therefore, for regular verbs that do not end in "er" (verbs ending in "re" or "ir", that is), simply chop off the "r" – along with any letters that follow it – but then do not pronounce the last consonant at the end of the word.

The second step: swap the "r"! - Verbs not ending in "er"

Returning to our first "non-er" verb example, attendre, you can see that chopping off the "r" above hasn't given us the present tense for you (formal) or for we, which behave slightly differently from the others. Fortunately, however, they are extremely straightforward because they follow exactly the same pattern as the "e" verbs earlier; simply swap the "r" – along with any letters that follow it – and replace them with either an "ez" for you, or an "ons" for we. Let's compare the "e" and the "non-e" verbs:

You think / You are thinking You wait / You are waiting We think / We are thinking We wait / We are waiting Vous pensez Vous attendez Nous pensons Nous attendons

NOTE! As you can see, the you form simply ends with "ez" and the we form with "ons". This is the same in both the "er" and "non-er" groups and so should be easy to remember.

The future

Using "going to" / "aller" to express the future

"Going to" can be used in essentially the same way as it is in English in order to express what you are "going to" do in the future. It is very easy to get the hang of, as you will see!

to go	aller
You are going	Vous allez
We are going	Nous allons
l am going	Je vais
He is going	ll va
She is going	Elle va
You are going (inf.)	Tu vas
They are going	lls vont
They are going (female group)	Elles vont
to eat	manger
I'm going to eat.	Je vais manger.
I'm going to eat it.	Je vais le manger.
l am going to go there.	Je vais y aller.
later	plus tard
I'm going to go there later.	Je vais y aller plus tard.
He is going to prepare	ll va préparer
He is going to prepare the dinner.	ll va préparer le dîner.
He is going to go out this evening.	ll va sortir ce soir.
She is going to leave this evening.	Elle va partir ce soir.
to stay	rester
You are going to stay here this evening.	Vous allez rester ici ce soir.
You are going to stay here this evening. ( inf .)	Tu vas rester ici ce soir.
We are going to take it.	Nous allons le prendre.
They are going to take it.	lls vont le prendre.
They are going to take it. ( female group )	Elles vont le prendre.

Using "going to" / "aller" in questions

Are you going to prepare dinner this evening?	Est-ce que vous allez préparer le dîner ce soir? / Allez-vous préparer le dîner ce soir? / Vous allez préparer le dîner ce soir?
Are you going to prepare dinner this evening? ( inf. )	Est-ce que tu vas préparer le dîner ce soir? / Vas-tu préparer le dîner ce soir? / Tu vas préparer le dîner

Using "will" to express the future

There are two main ways to express the future in French. The first is by using "going to", which we have just looked at above; the second is by using "will". "Going to" and "will" are relatively interchangeable in spoken French, so in general you will be able to use whichever you prefer when speaking the language. In formal written French, however, there is a preference for "will".

ce soir?

Let's learn about this tense now.

NOTE! The key to using "will" correctly is simply to hook the appropriate version of "have/has" onto the "r" at the end of a verb.

I have

J'ai

Therefore "have", for "I" / je, is "ai".

Hook this "ai" onto the "r" at the end of a verb, such as "to eat", which is manger, and you will get mangerai, which means will eat.

I will eat.

Je mangerai.

The Future

"To leave" is partir .
I will leave	Je partirai.
"To speak" is parler .
l will speak	Je parlerai
We can also make "he will" simply by looking a	at "he has":
He has	ll a
Again, we simply hook the ${f a}$ onto the " ${f r}$ " at th	ne end of the verb.
He will leave He will eat He will speak	ll partira Il mangera Il parlera
Let's look now at you have and we have.
You have We have	Vous avez Nous avons

For you and we, you will use only the ends of the words for "have". For you take the "ez" from avez, and for we take the "ons" from avons, and then hook them onto the "r" at the end of the verb.

You will leave.	Vous partirez.
You will eat.	Vous manger ez .
You will speak.	Vous parlerez.
We will leave.	Nous partirons.
We will eat.	Nous mangerons.
We will speak.	Nous parlerons.
They have	lls ont
They will leave.	lls partiront.
They will eat.	lls mangeront.

They will speak.	lls parleront.
They will speak with you tomorrow.	lls parleront avec vous demain.
You have (inf.)	Tu as
You will leave. (inf.)	Tu partiras.
You will eat. (inf.)	Tu mangeras.
You will speak. ( inf .)	Tu parleras.

As you can see, this is not so difficult, as long as you know the French for "have/has". In terms of pronunciation, the key sound at the end of these words is the "have/has" hooked onto the "r". It is important to make this "r" sound clear.

For I will and you will the key sound at the end of the words is "Ray" – they are spelt differently ("rai" and "rez" respectively) but are pronounced in the same way.

For we will and they will the key sound at the end of the words is "Ron" – they are spelt differently ("rons" and "ront" respectively) but are pronounced in the same way.

For he will, she will and they will (inf.) the key sound at the end of the words is "Ra".

So, in terms of the sounds you will hear at the end of the words, remember that it will always be either Ray, Ron or (the Sun God) Ra leading you into the future - without exception!

Let's look at a few examples:

I will eat with you later.	Je manger a i avec vous
	plus tard.
We will eat with you tomorrow morning.	Nous mangerons avec vous demain matin.
He will leave this evening.	Il partira ce soir.

The Future

Let's try it with another verb, this time one ending in "dre". Again, simply hook the correct endings onto the "r".

I will wait. I will wait for you. He will wait for you. He will wait for me. He won't wait for me. She won't wait for me this evening. J'attendrai. Je vous attendrai. Il vous attendra. Il m'attendra. Il ne m'attendra pas. Elle ne m'attendra pas ce soir.
Travelling in France

You now have a chance to use what you have learnt to deal with those everyday situations you are likely to come across when travelling in a French-speaking country.

You will be familiar with the scenarios below from their use on the CDs. The best way to use them here is in the same way as in the core course review above: first read through a scenario, looking at both the English and the French, and then go back to the beginning of that same scenario and, while covering the French side of the text, translate the English into French – just as you did when you listened to the CDs.
